SHEEP RUN

BUZ TATON dismounted from his cayuse in front of the General Feed Exchange in Waddieville and squared his shoulders before crossing the street. He glanced once at his foreman, Biff Halliday, cocked his head to one side and said, "Well, this is the showdown Biff . . . let's get it over with!"

Biff Halliday reached out a restraining arm.

"Look, boss," he said, "take it easy. You know what Doc Latum said about gettin' your blood pressure up."

Taton bristled. He was a bull-like man, built stockily and he had a flushed, ruddy complexion, bright, keen eyes and an aggressive manner.

"You goin' back on me, too?" he demanded. "Listen, Biff, you're my foreman, and you're a cattleman, not a sheepherder! You were brought up around longhorns, weren't you, just like me? Biff, I can't stand the sight of sheep, nor of sheepherders, either! And I've stood my last grass-cuttin' from Growby!" Once more he squared his shoulders. "You comin' with me, or do I get me a new foreman?"

Biff shook his head. "Boss, I'm a human being, and those sheep people are human beings too!"

"They're profit-ruinin' careless galoots with no more idea of what they're doin' than a toad has when it gets in the shade!" Buz Taton boomed. He waited for the stagecoach to rattle by on its way toward the Ezratown road, then crossed to where Silas Growby stood talking in conversation with Doc Latum who was both a medico and veterinarian.

Growby, a small, quiet-faced man looked up as the tall shadow of Buz Taton fell across the sunlit space before him. He nodded gently.

"Hello, Mr. Taton," he said. "Anything I can do for you?"

"Anything you can do for me?" Taton almost roared. "Well, you sure can, Growby. This is cattle-country, and just because you sheepherders got a foothold in here is no reason to think you can own the range!"

"I don't think I do, Taton," Growby said quietly. "I raise sheep just as you raise cattle . . ."

"Your sheep are cuttin' all the grass roots with their hoofs!" Taton raged. "Just last night I found part of my north pasture ripped up. Didn't take much brains to realize sheep did it. And your spread borders on my north pasture!"

Doc Latum started to speak, but Growby put a hand out.

"Taton," he said, "you said this is cattle country. It isn't, any more than it's sheep country. It's also wheat country." He paused, smiling a little. "Matter of fact I heard some of your longhorns got into Ted Boaglun's wheat crop last week."

Taton colored, in great embarrassment.

"What's more," Growby went on, "my sheep did get into your north pasture, but only because your barbed-wire fence went rusty years ago and fell down!"

A purple tinge came into Taton's face. At this point Doc Latum spoke up, hurriedly.

"Buz," he said, "I'm warnin' you for the last time . . . keep your temper down, or, if you have to, take it out on a cottonwood or a tumbleweed. Watch your blood pressure! Besides . . ." The grave look disappeared from his face and he smiled broadly. "You're always makin' a big fuss about little things, Buz. Why not try takin' it easy by overlooking something big, even if it happens. Otherwise . . ." He waggled his head. "Remember what I said about your blood pressure."

Buz Taton said nothing for a moment, though it looked as though he were mentally counting to a hundred. The purple tinge in his face got deeper and then it began to fade out. Breathing heavily he glanced at Growby and growled.

"Now I'm warnin' you, Growby. I'm within my rights in demandin' that you keep a sharper eye on your sheep, busted fences or no busted fences. Trouble with you is, you've got too small a bunkhouse crew! A crew that small can't handle herds the size of yours!"

"I'm sorry to say you're right, sir," Growby said. "But my outfit started out small, though we're growing. I'm putting in more men as soon as I can."

"And, in the meantime, lettin' your boy ride herd on five hundred head!"

Growby flushed.

"He's a good boy!" the sheep rancher said. "And a smart one. And even if he's young, he wants to learn the business!"

Taton snorted.

"He won't learn it from you!" he said, annoyed. "And the next

EVERY HOMBRE THAT WALKS BY--I IMAGINE HE'S LOOKIN' AT ME... RECOGNIZING ME! I CAN'T STAND MUCH MORE OF THIS!

BEFORE LONG, HE REACHED THE BREAKING POINT...
THEY GET THE PAYROLL TOGETHER EVERY FRIDAY NIGHT! IF I CAN GRAB IT, IT'LL GIVE ME A GRUBSTAKE TILL I CAN GET OUT OF THE STATE!

GOOD THING I WATCHED THE BOSS ALL WEEK! I COULD DIAL THE RIGHT COMBINATION IN MY SLEEP!

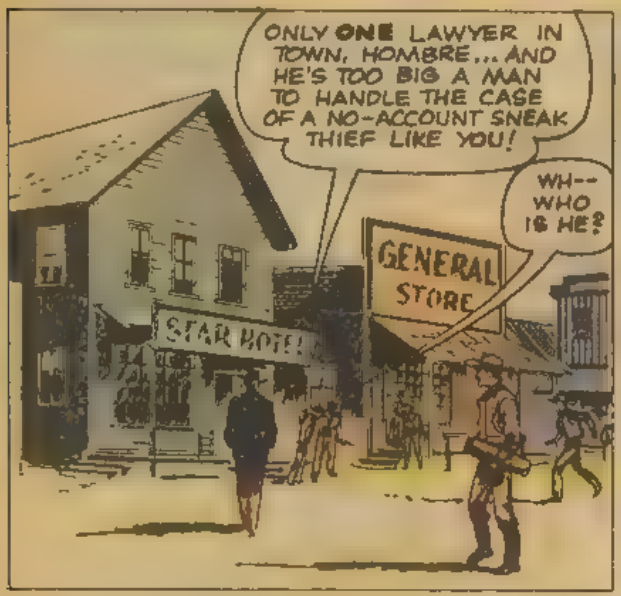
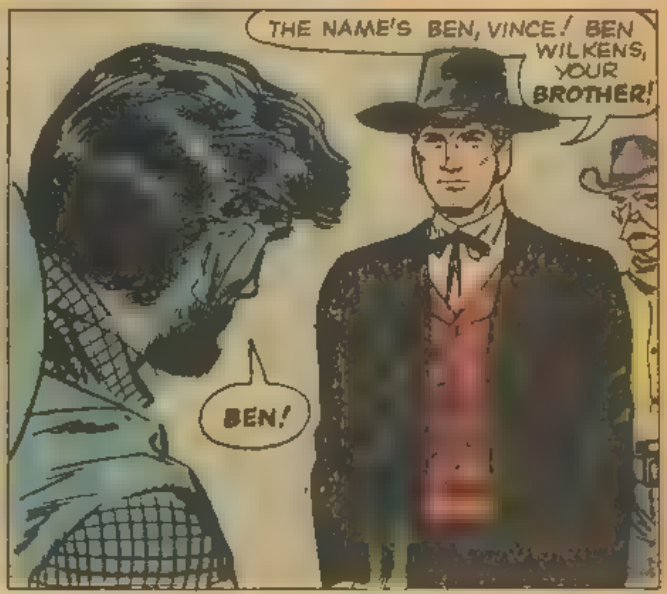
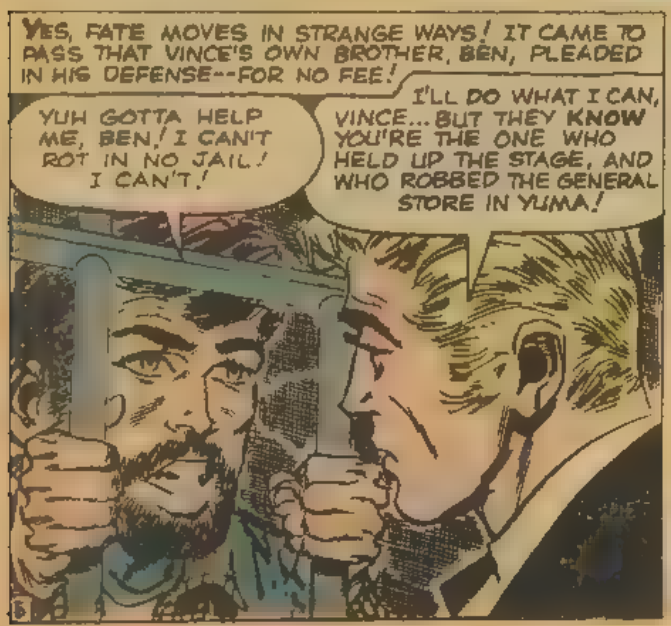
WELL, WELL, IF IT AIN'T THE DISH-WASHER! I NEVER DID TRUST YUH!
I-I WANT A LAWYER!



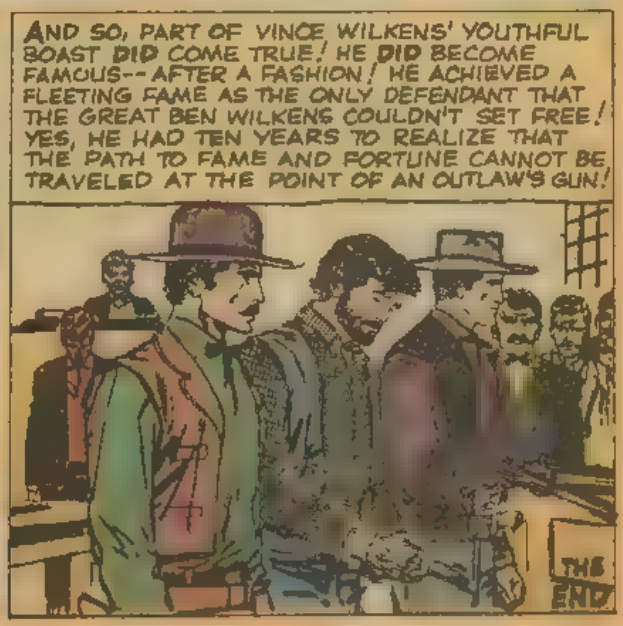
ONLY ONE LAWYER IN TOWN, HOMBRE... AND HE'S TOO BIG A MAN TO HANDLE THE CASE OF A NO-ACCOUNT SNEAK THIEF LIKE YOU!
WH--WHO IS HE?
GENERAL STORE
STAR HOTEL



THE NAME'S BEN, VINCE! BEN WILKENS, YOUR BROTHER!
BEN!



YES, FATE MOVES IN STRANGE WAYS! IT CAME TO PASS THAT VINCE'S OWN BROTHER, BEN, PLEADED IN HIS DEFENSE--FOR NO FEE!
YUH GOTTA HELP ME, BEN! I CAN'T ROT IN NO JAIL! I CAN'T!
I'LL DO WHAT I CAN, VINCE... BUT THEY KNOW YOU'RE THE ONE WHO HELD UP THE STAGE, AND WHO ROBBED THE GENERAL STORE IN YUMA!



AND SO, PART OF VINCE WILKENS' YOUTHFUL BOAST DID COME TRUE! HE DID BECOME FAMOUS--AFTER A FASHION! HE ACHIEVED A FLEETING FAME AS THE ONLY DEFENDANT THAT THE GREAT BEN WILKENS COULDN'T SET FREE! YES, HE HAD TEN YEARS TO REALIZE THAT THE PATH TO FAME AND FORTUNE CANNOT BE TRAVELED AT THE POINT OF AN OUTLAW'S GUN!

time one of your sheep herds gets onto my land and ruins the grass for my cattle feed, I'm takin' the matter to court!"

Growby said nothing, but went a little pale, then turned, bid good-bye politely to Doc Latum and walked off toward the General Feed Exchange. Doc Latum, shaking his head, muttered a farewell to Taton and departed for his office down the street.

Buz Taton stalked back to his horse, sided by Biff Halliday. Both men mounted.

"Well, that showed 'em," Buz said forcefully.

"Yes, boss, it sure did," Biff murmured.

The cattle rancher glanced sharply at his foreman.

"Well, it did!" he insisted. "Biff, you want to get a ranch of your own some day, don't you?"

Biff nodded.

"Then playin' soft won't help you keep it!" Buz said, banging his fist down on the horn of his saddle.

"Well, maybe . . ." Biff said, amiably.

"No maybes about it! I know!" his employer roared. "Let's get goin'! I got an idea we ought to keep our eyes out for Growby's kid. I saw him herdin' that five hundred head up toward the gulch between Growby's runs and our west grasslands. And if so much as one of them lambs sets a foot on our land, I'll . . ." He left the sentence unfinished as he quickly slapped reins and dashed off.

From the Ezratown road, a mile from Waddieville, Taton branched off toward the north, using a little-frequented trail that led past large patches of alkali toward the fertile, greener grounds. He kept muttering to himself. From time to time Biff Halliday glanced at his boss out of the side of his eye.

Half an hour later they came to the beginning of the gulch. Normally full of grass, it had been stripped clean by Growby's sheep. Taton's annoyance grew as they progressed up the gulch. At last, in the distance, he heard the all-too-familiar sounds of sheep, bleating up ahead. Dashing his horse up the gulch side, he rode it up a further rise and then halted.

"Look there!" he said in excitement to Biff.

Ahead lay the boundary of Growby's sheep runs and the west section of Taton's grasslands, a strip hemmed in by low, rocky cliffs to the east. A large herd of sheep was milling toward the boundary as they watched, with a mounted rider vainly trying to hold them back and turn their head again to the runs.

"What did I tell you?" Buz fumed. "That Growby kid's gettin' himself in trouble! In half a minute those sheep will break for the greener grass!"

As he spoke, the front of the herd divided sharply, and both sections broke into a frenzied run. The boy on the horse rode quickly ahead and tried to circle around them but they were too quick. An instant later the whole herd was over the boundary and spreading out, hoofs pounding on the green grass.

Buz Taton broke his horse into a gallop; he was followed almost immediately by Biff. Within a few minutes they'd caught up with the Growby boy. He sat there on his horse, a dejected boy of fifteen. Behind him his herd was smashing through the grasslands, their hoofs ripping the tender roots to pieces. The boy's lower lip trembled.

"You . . . you oughta have fixed your fences, Mr. Taton . . ." he began, and there was the hint of a tear in his eyes. "'Twasn't my fault!"

Buz Taton opened his mouth to speak. Then, suddenly, he closed it. His hand, set to strike a fist on the horn of his saddle, came quietly to rest.

"That's all right, son," he said. "Forget it. Sure it wasn't your fault. It was mine. You wait for the sheep to feed and come home."

Abruptly he wheeled and headed back for the rise, pausing at the top to look back. He couldn't avoid the sly look on Halliday's face.

"All right . . . so I'm a softie!" Buzz growled. "But I guess Doc Latum was right when he said I ought to at least try watchin' my blood pressure." His voice softened. "But there was something else, Biff. That kid was cryin'. The minute I looked at him, I saw myself, at the same age, in the same kind of trouble. Makes a man think."

Biff Halliday nodded, smiling. "'Course, the grass is ruined."

"What if it is?" Buz trumpeted. "If the grass roots are all cut, that means we don't have to do any special plowin' to put in wheat in the west lands, after the fences are fixed. What's wrong with branchin' out with a little wheat growin'?" He glanced down at the Growby boy. "Seems like I remember hearin' something somewhere about every cloud havin' a silver linin'!"

Train at home this practical new way for a good job, steady work, secure future in AIR CONDITIONING & REFRIGERATION

Are you pinned down in a low-pay job with a dim future? Are you more likely to be laid off than promoted? If so, CTI has news for you. Top-pay jobs with security are waiting in the fast-growing Air Conditioning and Refrigeration industry... where 20,000 additional technicians are needed each year. Your life takes on new meaning—you feel more hopeful and confident—when you are training for the many fine opportunities just ahead. May we send you the complete story? Main coupon for free facts.

Without extra charge, CTI sends heavy-duty commercial-type condensing unit (below); mechanic's tools; and gauges. After unit is assembled, you can build an air conditioner, freezer, refrigerator or milk cooler. Only CTI offers this practical training feature.

You learn by practicing with real equipment

During the past 12 years, production of air conditioning units increased 400%. Only one other industry did as well. Surely opportunities for success are outstanding. And to help you get into this high-pay field, CTI sends practical training. CTI bridges the gap between your lessons and practice by sending parts and tools to build an operating condensing unit. You do field-type projects, get valuable experience.

You can earn money during your training

Many CTI students, after a few months of training, begin to make money. They do repair work "on their own"; some get part-time jobs with dealers and repair shops. Such experience often leads to the establishment of a service business. Profit from spare-time work pays tuition, buys extra equipment, builds a savings account. CTI training can pay its own way.

Outstanding opportunities to go in business

Only 8 percent of American homes are air conditioned. The growth potential is enormous—plenty of room for thousands of new repair shops. It is relatively easy to start a business in Air Conditioning and Refrigeration. If you have the know-how (that you get from lessons) and the experience (that you acquire from practicing) you've made a beginning. Many have done it.

CTI

CTI training pays off in pay, prestige and security. We have prepared an interesting, fact-filled booklet on opportunities and how you are trained. Mail coupon for your free copy. Act today.
